Doña Bárbara, a story based on the novel by Venezuelan author Rómulo Gallegos, and adapted to the theater by Eddie Gonzalez.

Doña Bárbara is a wealthy landowner hardened by an experience she had as a teenager: she was raped by the same men who killed her first love. She grew vicious, and has accumulated her vast lands and cattle herds by using men, as well as illegal means, such as bribery of local officials.

One of the few remaining landowners in the area is Santos Luzardo, who has returned from abroad to take control of his family's ranch. He suspects his foreman, Don Balbino, had been working for Doña Bárbara in stealing his cattle.
